intant was found in a pool of water in an abandoned quarry near Alberene, in the southern part of the county. The woman, who is white, gave birth to an infant in the University Hospital early in April, and the local branch of the Salvation Army became interested in her case and secured board and lodging for mother and saly in this city. About the latter part of the month her benefactors discovered that she had suddenly vanished, taking the child with her, and investigation disclosed the fact that she had returned to her home. At the conclusion of the case an indictment was found against Albert Ragiand, of the Alberene section, on the charge of killing the child.
